Pride as Protest Since 1776

And Some Took It Literally

By Sue O'Connell

Boston's 56th annual Pride parade filled the streets Saturday as the Pride for the People festivities drew crowds estimated at up to a million people, with marchers winding from Copley Square to an all-ages festival on Boston Common. Roughly 12,000 marchers and 300 organizations took part.

This year's theme "Pride as Protest Since 1776" nodded to the nation's 250th birthday, and organizers leaned

'We would not be here today if it weren't for Barney Frank': Gov. Healey's remarks at the Faneuil Hall memorial

A memorial service for former Congressman Barney Frank, who died May 20 at age 86, was held Monday, June 8, at Faneuil Hall. Hundreds gathered to remember the 16-term congressman, who in 1987 became the first member of Congress to voluntarily come out as gay. Speakers included Gov. Maura Healey, Boston Mayor Michelle Wu, former House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, Congressman Jim McGovern, and

Frank's longtime friend and former State House colleague Jim Segel; former Secretary of State John Kerry and Sens. Elizabeth Warren and Ed Markey were among those in attendance. Below is a portion of Gov. Healey's remarks, lightly edited for clarity. The full service is available on YouTube: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8aPo-XHzGhE>.

"I want to say something about the impact that Barney Frank had on me.

I think I was in high school when he came out publicly. I remember something about that, and of course I hadn't even come out, so it didn't exactly hit at that time. But I will tell you: years later, when I made a decision to run for office, Barney Frank was the first person I thought of, because I knew that, because of his bravery — and remember, this is the '80s. This is not today. This is not the 2000s. This is not the 1990s. This is the 1980s. Barney Frank showed incredible bravery, in my view, to — yes — answer the question posed to him by the reporter: "I'm gay, so what?" What a masterful way to address that.

And then, of course, he went on this incredible career, showing up not just for the gay community but showing up for all of us in so many ways, and becoming such an incredible force, with such an impact on our country. I just want to appreciate the bravery of someone like Barney Frank.

One of the last times I saw him was at the service for Ann Maguire. Those of you who don't know Ann Maguire — she's a lesbian. She was also Tom Menino's campaign manager, who brought him to be the mayor of Boston. We were celebrating Ann's life. And I note Barney because I think, for any of us who come from the community who've been able to get elected — even re-elected, elected to other positions — it's because of trailblazers like Barney Frank. It's because of him. And, safe to say, I speak for those of us who benefited from that to just say: I know we would not be here today if it weren't for Barney Frank.

The other thing I recall personally about Barney is a lot of discussions about DOMA. Back in 2013, when I was in the Attorney General's office, Mary Bonauto and I led a case to challenge DOMA, which of course undermined marriage equality here in Massachusetts, stripping rights and benefits from lawfully married couples. We were the first state to challenge — and successfully challenge — that law, as affirmed by the Supreme Court in the Windsor decision.

I want to credit Barney Frank for that win, in many respects. See, years before, when DOMA was first introduced in 1996 — it was introduced as a political strategy, of course — in that year's elections, it passed with overwhelming votes. But even as it did, Barney used that as an opportunity to lay the groundwork for equality, to lay the groundwork for something he knew would not happen right then but would happen at some point.

At the time, I remember, he challenged any member of Congress to come forward and explain how their own marriage was threatened by the love and commitment of two women or two men. When they said it was not their marriages but the institution that was threatened, he said on the House floor that that argument could only be made by someone in an institution, because it has no logical basis whatsoever. And with that, he acclimated a great body to the possibility — the potential — of what marriage equality could really look like. And I know that, because [that] was done fifteen years before we filed that case and were successful. But he planted the seeds and gave people a greater understanding just by those very comments. And that's what he was about: through his seriousness, through his humor, he managed to humanize issues."

A guide to names and references in these remarks:

Ann Maguire (1943–2023) was a pioneering Boston LGBTQ+ activist and political strategist who managed Elaine Noble's 1974 campaign — making Noble the first openly gay candidate elected to any state legislature in the U.S. — and Thomas Menino's first mayoral campaign in 1993, later serving as his chief of health and human services. She died December 29, 2023, at age 80.

Thomas M. Menino (1942–2014) was the longest-serving mayor in Boston's history, holding office from 1993 to 2014.

Mary Bonauto is the civil rights project director at GLBTQ Legal Advocates & Defenders (GLAD), best known for arguing Goodridge v. Department of Public Health, the 2003 case that made Massachusetts the first state to legalize same-sex marriage, and Obergefell v. Hodges before the U.S. Supreme Court in 2015.

DOMA, the Defense of Marriage Act, was a 1996 federal law that defined marriage as between one man and one woman, denying federal recognition and benefits to same-sex couples even where their marriages were legal. In 2009, Massachusetts became the first state to challenge the law, in a suit filed by the Attorney General's office alongside a companion case brought by GLAD. The Supreme Court struck down DOMA's core provision in United States v. Windsor in 2013.

Finding Pride as an LGBTQ+ Parent in 2026

by Dana Rudolph | drudolph@mombian.com
contributing writer

Pride is a word that contains multitudes. This month, I am thinking about how the various aspects of Pride and pride come together for me as an LGBTQ+ parent at this moment in history.

My pride in being an LGBTQ+ person comes from within, while my pride as a parent comes from my son, but those manifestations of pride are inextricably linked. Pride in ourselves should ideally come before we ever start to parent. If we are not proud of who we are, it is more difficult to instill pride in others—and teaching our children to be proud of who they are is one of our most sacred duties as parents. That is not to say we must have a spotless track record; all people have done something, however big or small, of which we are not proud. Nor must we banish every speck of self-doubt; to sometimes doubt ourselves is human, and a complete lack of self-doubt can easily tilt into the kind of overweening pride that goes before a fall. But a reasonable sense that we are good and worthy will help us raise children who believe the same about themselves.

Being proud of our children doesn't just mean being happy when they win a sports trophy, perform in a concert, or make the honor roll, though. Our pride can come simply from watching them take a first step, share with a friend, or do the right thing in the face of pressure to do otherwise. It can mean watching them find their own interests and go in directions we never may have imagined, and seeing them grow into people of integrity and kindness. Perhaps some amount of our pride here is pride in ourselves for good parenting, but we should also simply be proud of our children for their achievements in and of themselves, while remembering that they are imperfect, too, like us.

It used to be that part of my pride during Pride came from reflecting on how my son had grown and learned during the school year that was ending. This year, however, he is beyond formal education and off on his career. I am no less proud of him for that, but the rhythm is different. That's okay; pride is best not confined to schedules anyway.

Nor is my pride confined to my own family. Beyond my overarching pride in being part of the broad LGBTQ+ community, I am also proud to be part of the loving, tenacious, and resilient community of LGBTQ+ parents. We exist around the world and have done so throughout history (though not always in the sense that modern labels imply). We have been resourceful and determined in starting our families; fearsome in protecting them; loving in raising them; and selfless in supporting each other. We have faced obstacles but still found joy for ourselves and our children.

Individually and together, we have fought for recognition and understanding, achieving much of which we can be proud. That progress is under attack right now, though, and I can't help but note that just days after Pride Month comes July 4, which for Americans means thinking about pride in our country. Indeed, the media buzz about that holiday is seeping far back into June this year, given the extra hullabaloo around the country's milestone 250th birthday. But being proud of the United States is an exceedingly difficult task right now; it feels like there is much less to be proud of in recent years as it takes actions that harm its people and alienate the world. Ironically, one could attribute much of our country's current woes to the overwhelming pride—in the sense of extreme arrogance and self-centeredness—of our current leaders.

I am trying, however, to at least find pride in a system that allows some states to implement positive

The strength of being here GOP fear mongering shows desperation

by Richard J. Rosendall | rrosendall@starpower.net
contributing writer

The Washington, DC Board of Elections texted me early in Pride Month that my ballot for the June 16 primary election had been received and would be counted. That is good.

Another good thing, especially in these challenging times, is to remember the progress we have made. It has been social and cultural and not only political. In addition to advancing LGBTQ+ equality in courts and legislatures, we have raised expectations among the young. Those expectations are very hard for right-wing demagogues to undo.

Permit me to cite a hometown example. A friend on Facebook wondered why former DC Council member Vincent Orange has not gotten more traction in his race for mayor. I pointed out that in a failed 2006 mayoral run, he called his four rivals morally unfit because they supported marriage equality. Getting him to budge on that issue was like pulling teeth. Fortunately, he was an outlier. The council passed civil marriage equality in December 2009.

Someone's need for attention is not enough reason to elect them in perpetuity. In the 2022 primary election for the Ward 5 DC Council seat, Orange's ubiquitous campaign signs availed him nothing as Zachary Parker beat him nearly three to one. Parker became the first openly gay black DC Council member. He represents a new generation of leaders. My generation laid the groundwork for them.

Perennial candidates like Orange remind me of an old song, "How can I miss you when you won't go away?" But it is better to focus on younger, more responsive leaders who have taken their place.

This positive trend is being seen around the country. New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani is a remarkable example of overcoming smears with a positive message and thousands of volunteers knocking on doors throughout the city. He has already balanced the city's budget, lowered the crime rate, and secured funding for universal child care, worker and small business restitution, and tenants.

James Talarico in Texas, running for a US Senate seat against Republican Ken Paxton, is hitting back sharply against ridiculous smears including charges that he is transgender and a vegan.

Regarding trans people, the false claim is made that sex-change surgery is being performed on children. If the people so alarmed about the small population of trans people were sincere rather than just exploiting fear and ignorance, they wouldn't need to lie so much.

As for the vegan charge, why anyone cares what other people eat baffles me, but we are talking about Texas. Talarico said he has been eating barbecue since before Paxton's first indictment.

“A lot of celebrities are expected to be at the Garden on Monday... This would be the first time Trump has appeared at a court in New York since being convicted of 34 felonies...You’d think Trump would be rooting for the Spurs, right? It’s what got him out of Vietnam.”

- Jimmy Kimmel has some fun with El Presidente’s expected appearance at Game Three of the Knicks/Spurs NBA Finals.

Picture it—West Hollywood, 2005. I was hosting LA Pride for the umpteenth time when controversy reared its ugly head. There were threats of protests over the choice of Grand Marshal, Paris Hilton. People felt the honor was being given out solely to capitalize on Hilton’s show “The Simple Life” and get mainstream media coverage (which is exactly what happened). The situation was slightly diffused by also naming Hilton’s mom Kathy as a Co-Marshall. And here we are, 20 years later, with Kathy Hilton being protested after being named Grand Marshal. The discussions started when Indigenous Pride LA cancelled their participation in the event due to Hilton’s connection with Donald Trump. “Many within our Two-Spirit, Indigiqueer, and Indigenous LGBTQPAI+ circles feel this year’s Grand Marshal choice does not align with the values, lived experiences, and spirit of Pride we seek to uplift.” I have so many questions—starting with when, oh when, will we stop adding letters to our community?

The protest picked up steam. Days before the event, Hilton withdrew. “I am honored to have been considered for this recognition and appreciative of the support I have received from members of the community that means a great deal to so many people. Pride is, and always will be, about celebrating and uplifting LGBTQ+ voices, experiences, and achievements.” The carefully crafted statement goes on to list her long association with various AIDS charities. And WeHo Pride replaced her with...NO ONE! “As Pride has always belonged to the community, after thoughtful discussions, the City of West Hollywood, the WeHo Pride production team, and Kathy Hilton have determined that the 2026 WeHo Pride Parade will not designate a Grand Marshal Icon honoree.”

In the aftermath, the iconic Lady Bunny weighed in: “May I suggest that next year, WeHo Pride actually take pride in their community and choose a local volunteer who’s toiled for years donating their time to a beloved LA charity?” Good idea—many cities have a Grand Marshal and Honorary (or Celebrity) Grand Marshal. While I’m mentioning Bunny, she had some concerns about my recent report on her being cancelled from a crocheting gig in Fort Lauderdale (look it up). She felt it was not clear when I said she once went after me on stage, that the incident was all in fun, which it was. And when I reported that she wanted Kamala Harris to be more liberal, that was incorrect—she wanted Kamala to be more progressive. Consider it cleared up. Make no mistake, I LOVE Bunny!

Pride conflicts are not isolated to the west coast. The Boston Public Library announced it would no longer be hosting a “Trans Period Pride” event. What is “Trans Period Pride”? I’m so glad you asked. According to the organization, “this event is for biologically female people who gender identify as male, who still menstruate. This is not for trans women (born male).” And we wonder why some members of the heterosexual community get confused! The event at the BPL was not cancelled. It was moved to another venue that is not “city-owned”. It gets better. “Catered dinner will be provided and free period underwear will be given to all attendees!” I’m speechless.

Turning my attention to a non-menstruating queer group, the cast issues with now-defunct “Queer Eye” are back in the news. The unemployed Karamo Brown finally spoke out, exclusively to “People” magazine (in return for a cover, no doubt). As had been rumored, the final straw came when Brown’s mom was in the control room during a taping and heard several of his costars criticizing him (Van Ness, France and Porowski were in the conversation). “The thing I know is the tears I saw in my mother’s eyes. She kept repeating, ‘I thought they were your friends.’ It made me realize I can no longer stay silent about how often I was made to feel like an outsider.” Karamo also reveals that a sexual harassment complaint was filed during the first days of the show when he was “fun and flirty” with a costar. He claims the complaint came from a third party and was resolved (but insiders say that is not exactly what happened). Karamo adds, “I think we all deserve a bit of grace for how we handled ourselves and one another. We were just doing our best. It may not have felt like that in the moment, but it’s very clear to me now.”

Some people work together and create real friendships. Take Jonathan Groff and Daniel Radcliffe. They got extremely close during their time on and off-

Broadway in “Merrily We Roll Along” in 2023 and 2024 (which earned them each a Tony Award). They both went on to do other Broadway projects (Groff in “Just In Time” and Radcliffe in “Every Brilliant Thing”). But they are reuniting for a film project. Radcliffe was already signed for “Trust the Man”, which is termed as a “Vietnam War thriller”. And now, Groff has signed on to costar.

This column comes moments after the Tony Awards. I intentionally left this paragraph blank in hopes that something truly noteworthy would happen. Given the host, I knew there was a chance P!NK would plummet from the rafters during one of her inevitable aerial stunts. And sure enough, she flew in—as Peter Pan singing, “I’m Flying!” She was helped down by former Tony host, Neil Patrick Harris, who cheekily said, “Haven’t you heard? The flying twinkles are all vampires now.” She then segued into an all-star opening called “Leading Lady Marmalade”, joined by numerous hunks, starlets, “dolls”, and various Broadway luminaries...and Lea Michele. P!nk certainly proved she had the pipes (and the gams). I’d be remiss if I didn’t mention the hot blond guy helping winners from stage right. And, for the love of God, could Paul Rudd have straightened Alden Ehrenreich’s tie before his speech? If the point of the Tonys is to drive tourism to Broadway, I’d say mission accomplished.

The Tony Award-winning musical “Chicago” is known for stunt casting—usually centered around the role of Roxie Hart. People from Christie Brinkley to Pamela Anderson have left their mark on the role (eventually, perhaps P!nk). Occasionally the part of Billy Flynn is assumed by such luminaries as Usher, George Hamilton, Taye Diggs, Mark Ballas, Colman Domingo, and even Jerry Springer. The next Billy Flynn will be another member of our community. Starting on June 22nd, Matteo Lane joins the cast (you’ll be forgiven for thinking he’d play Mary Sunshine). As with most of these other people, this will mark Matteo’s Broadway debut.

The Chicago Shakespeare Theater is presenting the North American premiere of the stage version of “Brokeback Mountain”. I reviewed the West End world premiere of this play back in 2023 when it starred Lucas Hedges and Mike Faist. I thoroughly enjoyed it (which is saying something, since I loathed the film). This production stars Harrison Ball and Jack Cameron Kay and runs through June 28th. You can get more info at ChicagoShakes.com.

This week’s “Ask Billy” question came from Mark in Boston. “I just heard that gay porn star Drake Von was arrested for attempting to strangle his partner in Las Vegas. Is it true? And could you post his mugshot?”

TMZ first reported that Von (real name Dawson Bacon) was arrested in Las Vegas on June 3rd. When the accuser was identified, we learned she’s a female named Quinn! She claims to have blacked out after Von “restricted her breathing”. She says he slammed her to the ground and told her to get on her knees and beg if she really wanted her phone back (sounds like he confused her with one of his on-screen sexual partners). Somehow, she escaped and called 911. A video of Von’s arrest has emerged. While an officer cuffs him and places him in the back of the patrol car, they casually discuss their favorite performers at the EDC—an electronic dance music festival that took place in Vegas weeks earlier. Drake was charged with felony domestic battery by strangulation, felony coercion constituting domestic violence, and misdemeanor domestic battery. He was held on a bond of $25,246. After being released, Drake said, “All allegations are false, charges will be dropped, and it was all a misunderstanding.” He later said, “I’m very good mentally. This was all a publicity stunt.” Giving credence to the “publicity stunt” angle is a photo Quinn posted of herself bent over and dressed as a cop with Von behind her in an orange jump suit. Have we all been had? Check out the photos and videos on BillyMasters.com.

When someone is able to pull the wool over Harvey Levin’s eyes, it’s time for me to end yet another column. At least I had the good sense to be skeptical! For more in-depth reporting, check out BillyMasters.com—the site that’s got a whole lotta allegations but not a single conviction. If you need me to run a background check on anyone, drop a note to Billy@BillyMasters.com and I promise to get back to you before Drake Von is named Grand Marshal of some city’s Pride Parade! Until next time, remember, one man’s filth is another man’s bible.

The Milestones That Moved Massachusetts And Our Country Forward.

Our state has helped shape the American story, but that story has also been shaped by the ongoing expansion of visibility, representation, and LGBTQ+ rights.

Here are some of the defining moments that helped move that progress forward.

Boston holds the state's first Pride march.

1974

The first openly gay person is elected to a state legislature in the United States, serving in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and advancing visibility and representation in public life.

1984

Boston passes the city's first human rights ordinance protecting LGBTQ+ rights.

1999

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court awards visitation rights to both mothers in a same-sex separation. A notable legal first for same-sex parenting rights in the state.

2016

Massachusetts extends non-discrimination protections for transgender individuals to public accommodations, becoming a national leader in full transgender civil rights.

2018

Massachusetts becomes the first state to uphold transgender non-discrimination protections through a popular vote, affirming the rights of transgender residents at the ballot box.

IMPORTANT FACTS FOR BIKTARVY®

This is only a brief summary of important information about BIKTARVY® and does not replace talking to your healthcare provider about your condition and your treatment.

(bik-TAR-vee)

MOST IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT BIKTARVY

BIKTARVY may cause serious side effects, including:

- ▶ Worsening of hepatitis B (HBV). Your healthcare provider will test you for HBV. If you have both HIV-1 and HBV, your HBV may suddenly get worse if you stop taking BIKTARVY. Do not stop taking BIKTARVY without first talking to your healthcare provider, as they will need to check your health regularly for several months, and may give you HBV medicine.

ABOUT BIKTARVY

BIKTARVY is a complete, 1-pill, once-a-day prescription medicine used to treat HIV-1 in adults and children who weigh at least 55 pounds. It can be used in people who have never taken HIV-1 medicines before, or people who have received HIV medicines in the past, or to replace their current HIV-1 medicines and whose healthcare provider determines they meet certain requirements.

BIKTARVY does not cure HIV-1 or AIDS. HIV-1 is the virus that causes AIDS.

Do NOT take BIKTARVY if you also take a medicine that contains:

- ▶ dofetilide
- ▶ rifampin
- ▶ any other medicines to treat HIV-1

BEFORE TAKING BIKTARVY

Tell your healthcare provider if you:

- ▶ Have or have had any kidney or liver problems, including hepatitis.
- ▶ Have any other health problems.
- ▶ Are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. Tell your healthcare provider if you become pregnant while taking BIKTARVY.
- ▶ Are breastfeeding (nursing) or plan to breastfeed. Talk to your healthcare provider about the risks of breastfeeding during treatment with BIKTARVY.

Tell your healthcare provider about all the medicines you take:

- ▶ Keep a list that includes all prescription and over-the-counter medicines, antacids, laxatives, vitamins, and herbal supplements, and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist.
- ▶ BIKTARVY and other medicines may affect each other. Ask your healthcare provider and pharmacist about medicines that interact with BIKTARVY, and ask if it is safe to take BIKTARVY with all your other medicines.

POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS OF BIKTARVY

BIKTARVY may cause serious side effects, including:

- ▶ Those in the “Most Important Information About BIKTARVY” section.
- ▶ Changes in your immune system. Your immune system may get stronger and begin to fight infections that may have been hidden in your body. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any new symptoms after you start taking BIKTARVY.
- ▶ Kidney problems, including kidney failure. Your healthcare provider should do blood and urine tests to check your kidneys. If you develop new or worse kidney problems, they may tell you to stop taking BIKTARVY.
- ▶ Too much lactic acid in your blood (lactic acidosis), which is a serious but rare medical emergency that can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: weakness or being more tired than usual, unusual muscle pain, being short of breath or fast breathing, stomach pain with nausea and vomiting, cold or blue hands and feet, feel dizzy or lightheaded, or a fast or abnormal heartbeat.
- ▶ Severe liver problems, which in rare cases can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: skin or the white part of your eyes turns yellow, dark “tea-colored” urine, light-colored stools, loss of appetite for several days or longer, nausea, or stomach-area pain.
- ▶ The most common side effects of BIKTARVY in clinical studies were diarrhea (6%), nausea (6%), and headache (5%).

These are not all the possible side effects of BIKTARVY. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you have any new symptoms while taking BIKTARVY.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.FDA.gov/medwatch or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

Your healthcare provider will need to do tests to monitor your health before and during treatment with BIKTARVY.

HOW TO TAKE BIKTARVY

Take BIKTARVY 1 time each day with or without food.

trans legislation across the country. In Massachusetts alone, six anti-trans bills are currently being tracked.

However, Black LGBTQ+ communities continue to experience Pride differently. As still a predominantly white event in many cities and towns across the country, many POC revelers experience social exclusion, alienation, and cultural invisibility. Today, in response, Pride celebrations centering people of color have emerged, creating Black-themed performances, parties, gatherings, and getaway weekends rooted in affirmation and belonging.

By 1999, Black Pride events had grown into the International Federation of Black Prides, Inc. (IFBP, now the Center for Black Equity). Recognizing the need to build coalitions beyond their immediate communities, IFBP also established the Black/Brown Coalition to strengthen networks of support and advocacy.

Different priorities

Black Pride grooves to a different beat. LGBTQ+ people of African descent use these events not only to celebrate, but also to define and advance their own priorities.

For example, Sunday gospel brunches, Saturday-night poetry slams, Friday-evening fashion shows, bid whist tournaments, house parties, the smells of soul food and Caribbean cuisine, and the beautiful display of African art and clothing are just a few of the cultural markers that make Black Pride distinct from the dominant queer culture.

Health and wellness are also central. At Black Pride events, attendees often encounter health booths offering screenings for sexually transmitted infections, vision care, hypertension, and HIV/AIDS. Black Pride also addresses broader social determinants of health affecting the community, including unemployment, housing insecurity, gang violence, youth homelessness, mass incarceration, prostate health, trans health, domestic violence, and depression. What goes underreported are the proactive, community-led efforts to confront and reduce these challenges.

The get-aways

Despite Provincetown's reputation for bohemianism and artistic freedom, Provincetown — unlike Oak Bluffs on Martha's Vineyard — did not historically have a Black enclave or a consistent summer influx of African Diaspora vacationers, whether straight or queer. That began to change in the 2000s with the emergence of Black-themed weekends such as Womxn of Color Weekend (WoCW) and Frolic (formerly known as Men of Melanin Magic). This year, those two weekends just wrapped — and the energy they brought to P-town was unmistakable.

WoCW ran June 2–7, filling Provincetown with five days of workshops, performances, parties, shared meals, and the kind of intentional community-building that is increasingly rare and increasingly necessary. For nearly two decades, WoCW's annual gathering has been a significant cultural anchor — a sacred haven of joy, love, sisterhood, and unapologetic self-expression. In this political era that increasingly targets marginalized communities, WoCW stands as a bold and affirming intersectional space. Year after year, it reasserts our right to exist, to gather, and to be seen in our fullness.

Founded in 2006, WoCW has become a vital cultural force in Provincetown. Since 2017, the visionary power behind its growth and evolution has been Jha D Amazi, WoCW's Executive Producer and Director. Under her leadership, WoCW transformed into a nonprofit organization with a bold, unapologetic mission: to bring racial and cultural diversity to Provincetown while cultivating spaces rooted in belonging.

"There aren't enough spaces that center and cater to our experiences as Black, queer, womxn — our expansive gender expressions and our layered identities," Amazi shared with me. "My hope is that our time together says Black folks, queer folks, women folks don't just exist here — we thrive here. We belong here."

Frolic welcomes queer men of color from across the globe. Founded in 2016 as Men of Melanin Magic and now celebrating its eighth year in Provincetown, Frolic is its signature summer event — an embrace of brotherhood culture, a supportive and affirming fraternity that fosters connection, belonging, and pride for all. For six days, Frolic offered boat cruises, pool parties, club nights, beach takeovers, panels, workshops, group exercise, and much more.

With more than 1,200 Frolickers filling Commercial Street — the town's vibrant main drag — the energy was unmistakable, with laughter, joy, and celebration rippling through every corner. Attendees arrived from near and far, from Amsterdam to Truro, the next town over.

"At its core, FROLIC is a space rooted in joy, belonging, and intentional community-building for queer people of color," Roneil Smith told me. Smith is the Executive Producer of Frolic Weekend. This multicultural brotherhood creates a safe, protective camaraderie that sparks lifelong friendships and shared memories.

Black Joy

The theme for Pride Month 2026 — resilience, liberation, and visibility — is more than a slogan; it is a call to action and radical self-care. WoCW and Frolic are both. They are acts of resistance: to take up space and rebuke erasure in this political climate. Those weekends are a bold declaration of our rights as queer people of color to be our authentic selves. Those weekends, we are all fam. It's the one time each year I gift myself a weekend of unabashed radical self-care. I only wish there were more.

into it. "LGBTQ people have been around before and since 1776," Boston Pride for the People president Adrianna Boulin said at a Friday press conference outside the Boston Public Library, crediting their courage for making today's visibility possible.

The parade stepped off at 11 a.m., with Governor Maura Healey, Senator Ed Markey, and Mayor Michelle Wu joining organizers for the ceremonial ribbon cutting. "This is a place that has always stood up for truth, for what we need in the future, and for doing what's right," Wu said.

Not every elected official got a warm welcome. Rep. Seth Moulton, whose 2024 comments about trans youth remain top of mind for many advocates, was booed by critics as he walked the route. Videos circulating on social media showed crowds jeering Moulton with chants of "Trans lives matter" as he smiled and waved; the congressman is giving up his sixth district seat to challenge Markey for Senate.

The political contrast was hard to miss. Lt. Gov. Kim Driscoll marched alongside Healey, one of two openly lesbian governors in the country, telling the crowd, "In a place like Massachusetts, you're seen, you're heard, you're appreciated". Rep. Ayanna Pressley, who also marched. Healey, speaking along the route, said, "With what's going on in the country right now, we need this... I want people to know if you come to Massachusetts you'll be safe, you can live openly".

Organizers billed the event as the largest Pride celebration and empowerment event in New England, and attendees emphasized that it remains as much a demonstration as a celebration — a point underscored by the parade's trans memorial. Boulin told WBUR the memorial contingent, in which marchers carry photos of transgender people who have died, is for her the most meaningful part of the parade — a way to say their names and ensure they're not forgotten.

The route's floats, banners, and handmade signs ranged from sharp political messages to humor and encouragement. On the Common, the festival featured performers headlined by hip-hop duo Flyana Boss and some 250 vendors, while Pride street fairs on Saint James Avenue ran both Saturday and Sunday. The whole celebration came a week earlier than usual to make way for World Cup festivities beginning across Massachusetts next week.

policies and protections that can offset what the federal government and other states are doing. To name just a few recent wins: Delaware has updated its parentage laws to better protect the children of LGBTQ+ parents and others formed via assisted reproduction; Connecticut has expanded its required coverage of fertility health care to be more inclusive of LGBTQ+ and single people; Colorado has a new law allowing civil suits against providers of so-called "conversion therapy," as a way to counter the U.S. Supreme Court's recent ruling that permits this discredited practice; and Hawaii enacted a law to protect providers of gender-affirming care. I hope that the many LGBTQ+ individuals, organizations, and allies who contributed to that work are taking pride in it. Pride is, as the saying goes, a protest, and it is gratifying to see that we are still finding ways to fight inequality and make change.

At the same time, we can also express Pride and pride simply by reading an LGBTQ+-inclusive picture book with our kids, talking with them about how their family was created, or affirming their own interests and identities. Those actions may not have the visibility of a march or boycott but build an important inner pride in the next generation.

The word pride is multifaceted, just like LGBTQ+ people. We have much to be proud of personally, in our families, and as a community, even as some people's hubristic pride threatens our progress. No matter how you are experiencing and expressing pride and Pride this year, may it be a time of renewed joy, strength, and resilience.
